

Let's Get Organized

Summer Support for Students Who Have Executive Function Difficulties

Instructor:

Josie Porcella, M.A., Sp.Ed.

Use your student's summer break to build new executive functioning skills essential for good organization. Organization problems are common among students who struggle with school. Even the most motivated of these children may find it hard to adapt to the increasing load of expectations as they grow older. By working with an education specialist, one-on-one, in a supportive environment, the sessions will also help to improve a student's self-esteem.

The CDM instructor may specifically address a variety of skills, including:

- Cognitive flexibility
- Planning and goal setting
- Time/homework management
- Self-monitoring and mindfulness
- Strategies for annotating
- Support for summer reading projects and assignments
- Organizing ideas, information and your stuff
- Memory
- Metacognition
- Use of Kindle/audio books
- Developing higher-order thinking

Sessions are individually scheduled on weekdays and held at the Center for Developing Minds.

To register or for more information, please contact the Center for Developing Minds at 408.358.1853
www.devmonds.com

© 2018 by Center for Developing Minds. All rights reserved.